Although there is no precise unified definition of PML, PML refers to the percentage of expected damages caused by a maximum-level earthquake that happened during an assumed period for the economic life of a building, to procurement cost for restoring the expected damages. The expected period for economic life of a building is 50 years, which is the useful life of a standard building. 4. Acquisition of the Property

1) Location of the Property

The property is located close to the east exit of Shinagawa Station. The area has seen a tremendous growth in concentration of corporations, mainly of large companies, due to the construction of large-scale office buildings and the launch of Tokaido Shinkansen (bullet train) operations at Shinagawa Station. The property is equipped with the latest fundamental facilities, and JPR evaluates it as a facility with high competitive advantages.

2) Efforts on Development Properties

Although the subject property is still under construction to be completed in July 2008, JPR has concluded a contract with the seller that allows the property to be transferred to JPR in five months after completion. By doing so, JPR has taken appropriate countermeasures for risk management to avoid risks regarding the building completion, delay in schedule or tenant solicitation as much as possible. JPR will continue to work proactively in acquiring development properties as a means to avoid excessive competition in property acquisitions and acquire blue-chip properties.

3) Collaboration with the Sponsor Company

Tokyo Tatemono Co., Ltd., an investor in JPR's asset manager, has participated in the development of the property (*1) with accurate knowledge of the landowner's desire to make the best use of assets. JPR is to acquire the unit ownership portion of the co-ownership and the building, which are planned to be owned by Tokyo Tatemono.

(*1) The project has been structured in a way in which Tokyo Tatemono Co., Ltd. constructs the building on the land owned by the landowner and, after completion, Tokyo Tatemono will exchange a portion of the building it owns for a portion of the land owned by the landowner that is of equivalent value.
